TWO GENERALS OR ONE?

The effort pur forth by the war departmentto create a multable borth for General Pershing | sity than those of the workers. without misturbing the regular army organization, may be highly communitable as far as ble-breeding arrangement.

things in the event another war does come. Thus terms alone, super-staff is not to interfere with or implugeon the regulation general staff which is charged with the conduct of the army and militia during peace times.

In considering the possibilities of this arrangement one's mind turns to Napoleon's term note to the Paris authorities when they sent one of their own generals into Italy to share with him | them could ever bring herself to assume a name the command of the Grand Army whose glory was just then eclipsing everything in Paris. "It to far better," said the man of destiny, "for the interests of France that you have one poor general than two good ones." And so he put it directly up to the directorate whether he or their man should take full command.

Two heads to the army will never work-not even in times of peace. Conflict between the two staffs will certainly result. There will be more rather than less politics in the war department, and the necessity is for very much less. And, above everything else, the superstaff idea is the certain seed of a bureaucracy that will make itself odious in the United States.

It is an indefensible idea, this of considering any man too big for available jobs and attempting to create one commensurate with his standing and rank. If Pershing is too big for chief of the existing staff, then leave him to past honors without assignment or portfolio, Let us not lose sight of the tremendously important fact that this is a republic.

RUGHES ON IMMIGRATION.

The position of Secretary Hughes on the question of immigration is tremendously heartening to those who have long believed that a rigid restriction of immigration was necessary to fully develop the protective tariff principle and safeguard America in a prudent manner.

The theory of protection has always been faulty because of the unwillingness of those given protection for their products to accept the application of the same principle to the human product. Much of the opposition to protection has grown out of the unfairness the ruthless selfishness to put it a bit differently-of protected interests to accept restricted immigra-

There can be no disputing the fact that had rigidly restricted immigration been in force all the years that a protective tariff was operative, America, would have been saved much of the industrial turmoil it has experienced and would have avoided the hyphen difficulty which hexet is during the war. To demand that the fruits of wages and high prices, and yet refuse to afford similar protection to American labor itself. is not only unscientific, but an exhibition on the part of vested capital of that libertinism that impels labor to turn rebel.

Unless that something is done, and speedly, how will those in authority ascape responsibility for that which will certainly be consequent upon such exent?

Our restriction on immigration should be so. rand," says Secretary Hughes, "that it would be impossible for most of these people to enter the United States."

To be sure it should. It is sincerely hoped that congress will not delay the remedial legialation asked for, and that such lorislation, once ennoted, will most a different fate than has been accorded it by the last two promients.

One can not help but wonder if the announcement of the ambassador to England, that he had suspended publication of his weekly, had anything to do with the courage of the senators who attacked him? Germany wants to pay off the allies by assuming their debt to the United States. Happily, it takes more than even two to strike this bargain, and again, happily, there's been a change in the United States government since Germany last had direct relations with it.

Protest Against P. D. Q.

Editor World I want to protest the suggestion of one P. D. Q. that the name of Main street be changed to Jones avenue. While I oncede all he has said about the many blessings that have been showered upon us and while I further contend that some recognition should be given for such splendid services as has been e given for such splendid a content of the gentlemen with the coral and civic vard stick of unfailing measure, et I do not think that the idea suggested by D. Q. is a proper one. In fact, I cannot seep but believe that he is stingy in his suggested by ion and that he does not fully appreciate the rood that has been brought to him and all his tieman with the yard stick of others' character and ability Tales was a lost city, indeed. Instead or refronting everything and everybody all the time as we should have been doing, we ploor ignorant hooks were devoting some little time to laughter and we were missing our opportunities on earth to find good in some of our fellow citizens. Mistakes were a part of our regular program of life and we had even gone of the men as they reached the vestibule, one of the men as sail missed of the city of thoughts that yet their system and instead of branding them with the iron rule of mistal measurement we were at time so weak as to forgive and forget. Editor World —I have just read in your paper an account of the letter of Hon Charles D. Carter of Okiahema to President Harding He is protesting against a negro being appointed registrar of the treasury.

Scripture and the Allies.

Editor World: The present situation of the allies collecting the indemnity from Germany by torce of arms, while they are begging America to forgive them the deht which they contracted to pay, reminds one very forcibly of the parable in the gospet—18 Matthew 23-31. "A certain King which would take account of his servants and when its had begun to vecken, one was brought unto him, which awed him ten thousand talents hat foresmuch as be had not to pay, his lord commanded him to be sold, and his wife, and children. " " " The servant thre fell down, and worshipped him, saying lord have incleased with me, and I will pay thes all.

Then the lord of that servant was moved with compassion, and loosed him and forgave him the debt.

compression, and loosed him and forgave him the debt.

But the same servant went our and found one of his fellow servants, which owed him an hundred pencer and he last bands on him and took him by the throat, saying, pay me what thou owest. And his fellow servant fell down at his test, and besought him saying, have patients with me and I will pay thes all. And he would not but wont and tase him into prison, the should pay the debt.

We in America, are suffering severely from financial depression. We are being heavily taxed to pay interest on the war debt. Fractically the whole people bought Liberty bonds till it hunt. And they bought at pay. Tens of thousands have been forced to sell since the depression. In the vast majority of cases those bond sales have been made at a ruinious discount.
